

The meaning of effort

Isaac Rodriguez was born in South Africa in 1992. When he was 10 years old he wanted to be runner. He decided to train everyday, and he went to school running every morning. Five years later he participated in an exchange with England. There was a mini-Olympics tournament. He travelled to London with his friends, and he was going to stay with an English companion for two weeks. All the family were very nice with him. They had a different culture, but there was a lot of respect. It was a very important tournament for him. He won almost all the races.

When he returned to South Africa, a very important athletic club wanted to sign on him for his incredible races. He became an example of effort to all young children.
